Growth of a $10,000 Investment1
A hypothetical $10,000 investment in the fund's Class A shares on 12/29/06 would have been worth $24,108 on 6/30/19.

This does not reflect the 5.75% maximum front-end sales load applicable to Class A shares which, if reflected, would have lowered performance. Assumes reinvestment of dividends and capital gains. Performance for the fund's other share classes would vary.

Risks

1. Equities are subject to market, market sector, market liquidity, issuer, and investment style risks, to varying degrees. Investing in foreign denominated and/or domiciled securities involves special risks, including changes in currency exchange rates, political, economic, and social instability, limited company information, differing auditing and legal standards, and less market liquidity. These risks generally are greater with emerging market countries. Small and midsized company stocks tend to be more volatile and less liquid than larger company stocks as these companies are less established and have more volatile earnings histories.

2. Underlying funds, unlike mutual funds, are not required to maintain a specific level of net assets. The underlying funds may invest in any form of investment, including other investment programs. Thus, the redemption price of an underlying fund's shares may be less than net asset value, which may be greater than the redemption price.
