Active Share: measures the percentage of a fund that is invested in securities, or is weighted, differently from the benchmark index, in an attempt to outperform, and can range from 0% (tracks index exactly) to 100% (completely active versus benchmark). Depending on the index and asset class, it indicates the degree to which a portfolio's weightings vary from its stated primary benchmark. Active Share may be a useful metric for investors to consider, along with other information, to evaluate whether to invest in a particular fund, but it does not serve as a predictor of excess return or manager skill.
