What Will You Do With Your Hard-Earned Money?

Life is full of important decisions. Taking control of your retirement assets is one of them. Whether you have one retirement account or several, an IRA may be able to help you invest beyond the possibly limited investment options of employer plans. Take control of your financial future today.

Paying for your retirement

Retirement is normally funded with three main sources of income: Social Security, pensions and personal savings/investments. This concept frequently is called the “three-legged stool” and illustrates the fact that you need support from all three legs in order to keep from falling down. Two legs aren’t enough — you can’t depend on your pension and Social Security alone to fund retirement. In fact, Social Security benefits make up about 30% of older Americans’ income, while 9 out of 10 people age 65 and over are receiving a Social Security Benefit.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, you’ll also need to use personal savings and investments to live comfortably in retirement.

Why roll over to an IRA? Why now?

Here’s one reason — control. Have you been paying enough attention to your 401(k) assets still held in your previous employer’s plan? Does your old 401(k) fit into your overall asset-allocation plan? Do you want to consolidate your investments in one place? It’s up to you to take the first step.

An IRA keeps your contributions invested on a tax-deferred basis, meaning you pay no taxes on your earnings, if any, until you withdraw them,<sup>2</sup> unlike other non-qualified investments where you pay taxes each year on your earnings.

THE DRAWBACKS OF AN EARLY CASH DISTRIBUTION FROM AN EMPLOYER-SPONSORED PLAN

At first glance, a cash distribution may sound appealing; it might be nice to have the extra money in your pocket immediately. However, this may not be an attractive option when you consider the federal and state income taxes that would potentially apply, as well as the 10% penalty that may be assessed to your hard-earned money.

(Note: When contemplating a rollover of retirement savings from an employer-sponsored plan to an IRA, there are numerous factors to consider, including, among others: relative cost of investments and other plan services and features, fiduciary status of plan/IRA provider, access to participant loans [available from some employer plans, but not from IRAs], range of permissible investments, level of services provided, and potential tax and penalty implications [current and future].)

	CONTRIBUTION	ELIGIBILITY	REQUIRED DISTRIBUTION
Traditional IRA A traditional IRA works very simply. For 2024, if you (or your spouse) has earned income from working, you can contribute up to $7,000 annually (less any contributions made to a Roth IRA), and invest it in one or more investment options that you select. If you are a participant in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, whether some or all of your contributions are deductible depends upon your modified adjusted gross income (MAGI) for the year. Any account growth is tax-deferred until you take distributions in retirement, so it has the potential to grow faster than a taxable account. Distributions, except the portion of your distributions that represents non-deductible contributions, are taxed when you receive them.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Up to $7,000 annually (less any contributions made to a Roth IRA). Annual contribution limits may be adjusted for inflation.</li> <li>Individuals aged 50 and older can make a “catch-up” contribution. Eligible individuals are able to make an additional contribution of $1,000 per year.</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Assuming you (or your spouse) has earned income in the year, you can contribute for any year.</li> <li>A non-working spouse is also eligible to contribute up to $7,000 in 2024, or $8,000 if age 50 or above, based on working spouse’s income.</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>If you were born on or after July 1, 1949 but before January 1, 1951, distributions must begin by April 1 of the calendar year following the year you reach age 72 and continue each year by December 31. If you were born on or after January 1, 1951 distributions must begin by April 1 of the calendar year following the calendar year you reach age 73 and continue each year by December 31.</li> </ul>
Roth IRA A Roth IRA is similar to a traditional IRA in that you can invest up to $7,000 annually (less any contributions made to a traditional IRA), and enjoy tax-deferred growth on any earnings. But there are some important differences. While contributions are not tax-deductible, a Roth IRA gives you the benefit of tax-free withdrawals — even before retirement — as long as certain qualifications are met.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Up to $7,000 annually (less any contributions made to a traditional IRA). <sup>2</sup> Distributions of accumulated Roth IRA earnings are tax-free and penalty-free if the taxpayer has owned a Roth IRA for at least five years and meets one of the following criteria: 1) attainment of age 59½; 2) death; 3) disability; or 4) first-time home purchase ($10,000 lifetime limit). Consult a tax advisor for further details.

Distributions from a traditional IRA (excluding any non-deductible contributions) will generally be subject to taxation at then-current federal and state income tax rates. Distributions made prior to age 59½ may also be subject to an additional 10% early withdrawal penalty tax, unless an exception applies. Amounts converted from a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA are taxable (excluding any non-deductible contributions) and can therefore subsequently be withdrawn from the Roth IRA tax-free at any time, but these amounts may be subject to the 10% early withdrawal penalty tax if the taxpayer is under age 59½ and withdraws the funds within the five-year period following the conversion.

Investors who are eligible to convert assets to a Roth IRA may or may not be eligible to make regular Roth IRA contributions. Allowable annual contributions to a Roth IRA are phased out based on taxpayer filing status and modified adjusted gross income (MAGI), as follows for 2024: single with MAGI under $146,000 — full contribution allowed ($7,000 if under age 50, $8,000 if 50 or older); single with MAGI of $146,000 to $161,000 — partial contribution allowed; single with MAGI of $161,000 or more — ineligible to contribute; married filing jointly with MAGI under $230,000 — full contribution allowed; married filing jointly with MAGI of $230,000–$240,000 partial contribution allowed; married filing jointly with MAGI of $240,000 or more — ineligible to contribute.
